

WPA Administrator Returns

THAT our fear Hope was being discriminated against in last spring's consolidation of the Works Progress Administration (WPA) was ungrounded, appears today in the fact that Claude Mann, who has charge of the 21 south Arkansas counties of the consolidated district, has returned his headquarters to this city from Camden.

It was becoming fairly obvious a year ago that the WPA was due for a consolidation and retrenchment, and regardless what one city lost there wouldn't be a corresponding gain for another city. The WPA as a whole was being curtailed and centralized—and subsequent developments prove this was so.

When the Hope district (No. 5) was consolidated with Camden and Monticello districts and Mr. Mann as District Five Administrator moved to Camden to govern the consolidated territory, the total setup at Camden covered 62 employees. Today the total at Camden is 12.

WAVERLY, Iowa.—(AP)—Sheriff Frank Sager said a Bremer county woman shot four of her children in their sleep Tuesday, fatally wounding two of them.

The woman, Mrs. Atlas Waters, admitted the shooting. She declared the children "wouldn't mind" her.

The tragedy took place in the family's far menin.

Sheriff Sager said the woman would be held without charge until the official investigation had been finished.

Hangchow, Canton and Tsingtao Are Their New Objectives

SHANGHAI, China.—(AP)—Japanese troops and warship movements Tuesday aroused Chinese fears that one of the nation's great coastal cities would suffer the fate of fallen Nanking.

The Chinese expected the Japanese to drive against Hangchow, Chekiang province seaport 110 miles south and west of Shanghai; Canton, China's southern metropolis; and Tsingtao, in Shantung province to the north.

There were authoritative reports that 11,000 Japanese soldiers had withdrawn from the Nanking area and embarked Monday night from Shanghai, apparently bound for Canton.

Unemployment Insurance Goes in Effect Jan. 1 in 22 States

The 21 states shaded on this map (and the District of Columbia) soon will begin receiving the benefits of their unemployment insurance laws. Noting that most of the large industrial states are among those who passed their laws in time to be eligible now for benefits, government leaders are interested in how well the payments will cushion the shock of business recession. The other states will come in for similar benefits later.

Can Accumulation of Reserve Funds Give Steady Jobs?

Nation Watches Experiment Anxiously—Vast Fund Is Needed

GET APPLICATIONS

First Due in January, Will Be "Rolling" in February

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON—At least 1,000,000 jobless persons will apply in January for unemployment insurance benefits under the Social Security Act. That figure is only a guess, but officials agree that it's as good as any other guess.

State employment offices where unemployed men and women must register for benefits in the 22 states, which begin to pay benefits after the first of the year, except to be swamped.

Few if any checks will be paid in January. They will begin to pour out in February, but probably will not reach full tide until March or April.

This fact should interest those who count on a prompt flow of new purchasing power and an immediate effect on the relief situation.

Each state has a waiting period of two to four weeks, during which registrants report to see if jobs can be found for them, before benefits can be paid. Large numbers of persons not legally entitled to benefits will apply, and the job of segregation will be tremendous.

Paying Taxes Two Years
About 11,500,000 employees are covered in the 22 states by unemployment compensation laws and another 9,500,000 will be under the system by the time the last state starts paying benefits in July, 1938.

By the end of January the total amount credited to the 22 states in the Treasury's unemployment trust fund will be close to $500,000,000. For two years employers have been paying payroll taxes to finance the system, graduated from 1 per cent and 2 per cent to a stationary 3 per cent beginning in 1938. Some states require employee contributions.

Some Exemptions
State laws vary in important particulars. Chief groups generally excluded from benefits are agricultural labor, domestic servants, public servants and casual labor. Usually employers of fewer than eight persons—and their employees—are exempted and excluded, although New York places the number at four and Pennsylvania at one, and there are other exceptions.

From 12 to 26 weeks of employment within the 52 weeks prior to registration are required for eligibility for benefits. Benefits are to be paid for periods of from 12 to 20 weeks, in amounts which usually will be about half a full week's pay per week but are limited to $15 a week.

Each prospective applicant, says the Social Security Board, should be sure he has a social security account number. If he happens to have worked on a job which is covered by the state unemployment compensation law but not by the federal old-age insurance plan, he should nevertheless have an account number and can apply for one at the nearest Social Security office or post office.

Can It Stand Strain?
Applications can be filed at the nearest public employment office on and after January 3 and subsequently should be filed immediately upon loss of a job. State regulations require applicants to report at certain times during waiting periods to see if other jobs are available for them. Claims for compensation must be examined and approved before benefits are paid, which will mean delay in many cases.

Whether or not the unemployment trust fund and the state deposits therein will be able to stand the strain of the rush for benefits which is anticipated as a result of rapidly increasing unemployment since September—and whether the federal government will some time be asked to make up the difference so that all benefits can be paid, as happened in England—depends on the length of the depression and the rate of increasing unemployment.

But federal and state officials thus far profess to be entirely optimistic as this score.

A Thought

Goodfellows Christmas Cheer Fund Drive Is Under Way Here

An empty pack and no gifts for hundreds of needy children is the problem confronting Santa unless YOUR contributions to the Goodfellows Christmas Fund fill the sack to the top. Toys, clothing and food are needed to make Christmas Day a merry one for every family. Santa's asking YOU to help him—don't let him hold the bag.

Hope's Christmas Goodfellows fund campaign got under way Tuesday with an initial report of $37.53 in cash.

American Legion committees are canvassing the city for donations of cash, clothing, candy and toys; and the churches will gather food for Christmas baskets.

Persons not canvassed by the committees may make their gifts to Hope Chamber of Commerce offices in the city hall.

The city's needy are being canvassed and registered by special committees, so that every family may have a real Christmas when Saturday morning comes.

The first report on cash gifts follows:

Church Service	Amount
A. B. Patten	23.03
Mrs. Leon Bundy	1.00

2. Would it be all right for one to send greetings to the persons who are his equals in the office in which he works?
3. Should a business woman wear eye shadow or mascara in the office?
4. For what occasion is a shoe with a French heel appropriate?
5. Should a stenographer gaze around the room or start a conversation when there is a pause in dictation?

What would you do if—

- (a) You are a business girl and wonder how you should remember your employer at holiday time?
- (b) Send him an impersonal gift?
- (c) Send a Christmas greeting addressed to him and his wife?
- (d) Wish him a happy Christmas the last time you see him at the office?

Western, Postal Make Appeal for 15 Pct. Increase

Slackening Business, Social Security Costs, Are Blamed

FIRST HIKE 30 YEARS

Only Other Recent Increase, During Government Operation

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies Tuesday jointly announced their intention to apply to the Federal Communications Commission for a 15 per cent increase in rates.

The increase, if granted, would be the first in 30 years of operation, except for the World War period when the utilities were under government control, the announcement stated.

Companies' Statement

"NEW YORK.—The telegraph companies are about to apply to the Federal Communications Commission for a 15 per cent increase in rates.

"In making this application, one of the oldest public service institutions is obliged to break a precedent of thirty years' standing. The position of the telegraph industry in the public service field is unique in that it does not assess a stand-by charge, but must rely for its income wholly on what is paid for each item of service performed. By progressive methods and a continued series of improvements and new developments in plant and operating processes, it has not only met all the increasing costs arising during the past three decades, but has actually decreased the cost of its service to the public.

"The only increase in telegraph rates which has been made in the past thirty years was made by the government when it operated the industry during the World War.

"Today, despite drastic operating economies the financial resources and credit of the companies are being jeopardized by the decline in revenues brought on by the general slackening of the business of the country, on which the industry depends, and the situation is made even more critical by the constantly growing cost of telegraph operation through heavy social security and other taxes, wage restorations, and mounting expenses of all kinds.

"As indicated by figures published a few days ago, the telegraph companies are operating either at a deficit or on a very slender margin, and, it is pointed out, if this condition continues, it will shortly impair their ability to continue rendering the efficient service on which the public depends and which forms such an essential part of the commercial and social fabric of the nation as well as an indispensable arm of national defense.

"In recent years the telegraph companies have offered a number of new and additional services at low rates for the purpose of developing new and enlarged uses of their service in an effort to increase the volume of traffic and thus keep their revenues abreast of the constantly mounting expenses, but in spite of favorable public reception of their innovations they have not been sufficient to offset the general down trend."

"Electricity is one of the farmers' best friends," she declared.

Mrs. Garland was followed by her husband who spoke on diversified farming. He pointed out that a cash income on the farm was essential for successful farming.

"A farmer's expense continues throughout the year—so to offset this we must have a cash income throughout the year. This is one of the provisions listed in the Plant-to-Prospere contest.

"There is a great need for better livestock production in Hempstead county. We need an industrial and agricultural free fair each year as an incentive to better farming," the speaker said.

Mr. and Mrs. Garland, in winning the contest, were awarded $100 by the Memphis Commercial Appeal. They are now entered in the sweepstakes contest sponsored by the newspaper.

Clifford Smith, county agent, spoke briefly and told how the Memphis newspaper conducted its annual contest for promotion of better farming in Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Missouri. The total cost in sponsoring this farm movement annually is $10,000.

Other guests of the club were Mrs. Clifford Smith, H. H. Huskey, president of the Hempstead County Farm Bureau, and Sheriff J. E. Bearden.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Garland Tell of Plant-to-Prospere Contest

A cash income throughout the year is one of the first requirements for successful farming, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Garland, winner of the land-owner's division of the Arkansas Plant-to-Prospere campaign sponsored this year by the Memphis Commercial Appeal, told members of the Hope Kiwanis club at Capital hotel Tuesday noon.

Mrs. Garland spoke on the home-improvement side. She told of planning the home budget, interior decorating, landscaping and the canning of meats and vegetables. She told of improved methods of farm life, pointing out that electricity gave the farmer's wife many advantages that she was once denied.

"Electricity is one of the farmers' best friends," she declared.

Common Sense Curb On the Demeagogs

THIS business recession must be getting serious. Father Coughlin is going back on the air.

There was an underproduction of most things during the last depression, but of one thing—demeagogy—there was a great glut, a superabundance that ought to have brought the good life unaided. The tubthumpers and the nation-savers come up out of the nowhere when business indices fall, like night-crawlers coming up out of the lawn after a rain.

So we might as well prepare ourselves for a new crop. Whether all of the old favorites will reappear or whether we shall have some brand-new ones is not clear, just yet; but that we shall have a bumper yield of them unless business revives is as certain as anything can be.

PROBABLY we shall survive the experience without much damage. A nation that could live through the last depression can live through anything, very likely, and what is ahead of us can hardly be worse than what we have been through.

But applied demeagogy is a dangerous thing, nevertheless, in this day of mass-propaganda techniques. It is dangerous for the same reason that a quack doctor with a suitcase full of patent medicines in dangerous at the bedside of a man critically ill. It offers the wrong sort of remedy, and offers it at a time when people feel desperate enough to try anything.

It ought to be obvious that a time of profound depression is the one time of all times when clear, unprejudiced and accurate thinking is needed. Yet that is just what the demeagogy does not offer; on the contrary, he offers a heavily emotional dose which makes clear thinking impossible. He calls upon people to emote their way out of their troubles. He appeals to their feelings rather than to their reasons.

He can do this, in a depression, because there are so many things to get emotional about.

EVEN in the best of times, Heaven knows, this imperfect world is full enough of injustice and inequality; when the wheels slow down and honest men are brought face to face with hunger and want through no fault of their own, it is 10 times worse. Than the demeagogy has his innings.

He has but to point to these crying wrongs, beat his breast passionately, damn all the constituted authorities for not doing something, and offer his own panacea. Let him rouse enough honest indignation, and he can save his panacea from critical examination; if anyone does criticize it, he can cry, "Ha! So you want things to go on as they are, do you?" And there is no stopping him.

No stopping him—except through the good sense of the people as a whole. In the long run, that good sense proved sufficient last time, and it probably will again. And if this recession deepens, it will once more be put to the test.

Go Easy On Brazil

UNDERSECRETARY of State Sumner Welles made an excellent point in his recent speech at George Washington University, when he remarked that America's "good neighbor" policy in Latin-American affairs has a direct application in the current upheaval in Brazil.

This policy, Mr. Welles points out, calls on the United States to refrain from minding its neighbors' business for them. In other words, the kind of government Brazil chooses to give itself is strictly Brazil's concern, not ours, and our abhorrence of the Fascist label should not cloud the friendly relations that exist between Brazil and this country.

As a matter of fact, added Mr. Welles, we may be a bit hasty in pinning the Fascist label on the Vargas regime. Not all of the facts in the matter are known, even now; and for Americans to fly into a furor over a Fascist government that may not turn out to be Fascist at all is rather silly.

The Family Doctor

T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

By DR. MORRIS FISHERMAN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Quiet, Restful Atmosphere Is Urged For Convulsive Disorder Sufferers

This is the eleventh in a series in which Dr. Fisherman discusses cause, effect and treatment of diseases of the nervous system.

(No. 482)

Once epilepsy is definitely diagnosed, the care given to the person concerned is of the utmost importance in regulating the number of attacks and the general health of the individual concerned.

When an attack comes there may be danger to life as well as to health. Furniture and other materials should be moved so that the person in the convulsive attack will not strike himself in any manner. Biting of the tongue is usually prevented by putting a spoon or lead pencil between the teeth. Tight clothing should be removed.

In the period of exhaustion which follows the attack the person is best permitted to lie absolutely quiet. No attempt should be made to hasten his awakening because an activity brought about too early may cause headaches and even persistence of the exhaustion.

In treatment of this condition now-days the doctor plans not only for the utmost in hygiene and improvement of the diet but also avoidance of fatigue which seems to lower resistance and increase the irritability.

Epileptics do best where they are not faced by exciting and irritating contrasts, but where life is even and smooth. They should not be exposed to extremes of heat and cold, irritating light effects, prolonged heat cycles, thunderstorms and similar atmospheric condition. The occupations which they choose should not be those which demand great physical labor, intense concentration, mental fatigue, emotional strain, worry or anxiety.

A great deal of research has been done on the diet and particularly the water balance of patients. Control of these factors seems to be important in lessening the number of attacks. Especially valuable are some of the new drugs which have been found to replace the bromides which used to be the only drug available for people with this condition.

A warning should be issued, however, against those people who prey upon the sick and who offer to sell "sure cures" for this condition. These cures consist invariably of strong sedative drugs, prescribed in a dosage and with a persistence far beyond that usually used by physicians familiar with the treatment of such cases.

A properly regulated hygiene of life, particularly in mental activities, the diet, the water intake and the rest, will do much to lessen the number of attacks in any case.

NEXT: Neuralgia.

There's Art to Getting Good Effect When Trimming the Tree

As every Christmas tree is beautiful to a child, it savors of the ridiculous to speak of "style." Yet there are certain rules to follow if you would get the best effect of your ornaments.

Distribution has so much to do with appearance that it pays to count the supply of glittering balls, and divide them equally among the pine boughs. This saves trouble, too, and you won't be robbing this and that branch later to get enough for the last one.

The heaviest boughs should hang near the widest part of the tree, although symmetry is not necessary.

If there is a toddler who has a tendency to eat glass, and most babies put everything in their mouths, use unbreakable toys for the lowest boughs.

In his side-of-the-mouth, tough-guy manner—as ever; and his new novel, "Serenade" (Knopf: $2.50), is well worth your while if you can stand a few shocks.

In this book, Mr. Cain deals with a broken-down grand opera singer who is on his uppers in Mexico City. Voice gone, money gone and pride gone, this man falls madly in love with a half-breed prostitute, recovers his lost voice by a convenient miracle, smuggles the lady back to the United States, and sets out to make a career for himself.

What happens then is almost as dizzy as some of the things that happen in real life. He breaks into the movies, scores a big success, gets a Metropolitan contract, and is presently sitting on the world, back in New York, as wealthy and as successful as a man could wish to be.

Then his buried past bites back at him. A sinister rich man who has a more-than-brotherly attachment for him comes on the scene; the hot-blooded Mexican lady picks up a bull-fighter's sword and kills the rich man; and then our singer goes down the ladder as fast as he came up, fleeing with his lady love to Latin America again and winding up about where he started on his uppers in Mexico City.

All of this Mr. Cain unrolls for you with great skill, so that this becomes one of those "once I picked it up I couldn't lay it down" books. It is fast, violent, outspoken, brutal—and, under everything, essentially romantic.

Romance isn't necessarily a matter of honeyed speeches, moonlight and honeysuckle, and stately southern plantations. It is principally a way of looking at life; among other things, it is the idea that the world can be well lost for love. That idea Mr. Cain expresses in this book.

Or make small cones, boxes and baskets from stiff gold paper. Children love to help with tree ornaments, to be left where Santa can get them. Stringing popcorn is something every child loves to remember.

Let Older Children Help

Perhaps the children are over the Santa Claus age, but there is to be a tree just the same. Then why not let them help to trim the pine, or spruce, on Christmas Eve? Ask them. Some children love a surprise more than helping, so in that case, mother and father you will have to be Saint Nick yourselves.

If you are tired of mixed colors, and want a change, all blue ornaments, or all silver or green, depending on your taste, make a beautiful effect. But don't forget the star at the top, whatever color scheme you choose. To me, Christmas colors are still red and green, but all red makes a rather overpowering display.

If you can find them, a nice change from spherical ornaments are glass birds. Children are always excited when they discover little animals and Santa Claus in unexpected places on the wonder tree.

However, it is best not to sacrifice glitter too much. This fruit-bearing evergreen must shine at all costs. If ornaments are scarce, a package or two of "icicles" the just the thing.

"Landscaping" Base of Tree

Under the tree, ah, here is where daddy shines at his best. He probably about July to browse for barnyard citizens in miniature, and to concoct tunnels and hills. But in case, just in case, mother, the terrain is left to your ingenuity. Hide the holder either with cotton sprinkled with mica, or get some dark green flannel, which lends itself easily to caves and mountains. Bright tin pans make good lakes, if you slide them under the cloth and cut holes.

Today "creches" are purchasable at a very few cents; that is the holy family and the manger scene. Many families prefer the "story" of Christmas to other decorations.

Hang some gayly wrapped gifts on the tree, for the children to pluck. The lights, I leave to you, your purse and your imagination.

Rice, wheat and millets are the three greatest food crops of China.

A line of English rajahs has ruled the independent nation of Sarawak on the coast of Borneo.

Paul Harrison in Hollywood

Still Men Reveal a New Type of Temperamental Film Star

HOLLYWOOD.—You'd think the movie stars would be extra gracious and co-operative with studio still photographers, for certainly the pictures printed in newspapers and magazines are the most invariably favorable publicity that players can receive.

Well, some of 'em are very nice indeed. Many are painfully persnickety, and others kick like a mule at the mere mention of posing for portraits. Hollywood's still men have a list of favorites very different from the preferences of most groups who come in contact with the stars.

Katharine Hepburn, for instance, is a photographer's delight. Her angular features offer chances for arty effects. She poses gracefully and patiently. And she keeps appointments on the dot.

Sylvia Sydney, on the other hand, may be a favorite of the correspondents but she's a headache to the camera boys. They're the ones on whom she pours whatever pent-up fury she happens to be hoarding. Nobody, perhaps even Miss Sydney herself, knows the reason for this antipathy.

Ginger Rogers, an agreeable and flexible personality in most ways, is another troublesome subject. For one thing, she's very difficult to light advantageously. For another, she refuses to follow photographers' direction and attempts to pose herself. Has a large mirror placed next to the camera and believes the lens will see her as she sees herself. Wrong, of course.

Marlene Dietrich and Claudette Colbert have the same trick. The latter will allow only the left side of her face to be photographed, and that adds to the complications.

He's Independent

Most still photographers are very reticent about discussing their subjects, but Bob Coburn, head of Samuel Goldwyn's still department, is such a skilful and sought-after picture maker that he can afford to be outspoken.

Also by refusing to play stone for the whims and tantrums of stars he has won respect and special requests for his services. Miss Sydney asked for him.

Constance Bennett used to have a trick of telling still men: "I'll give you just 10 seconds to make your picture." Then she'd ridicule them while they fumbled their equipment in an effort to get set up and shoot in such a short time.

When she gave Coburn, the 10-second ultimatum he picked up his camera and walked away. For three years thereafter he was the only photographer for whom she'd pose. And he always took his time.

Coburn, 34, has been in Hollywood 17 years and is a former cinematographer who returned to his first love, the still camera. Most difficult subjects he recalls in his time were Clara Bow, who seldom kept an appointment and clowned through those she did keep, and Ricardo Cortez. The latter was sarcastic and just plain ornery.

Some Are Helpful

Joan Bennett wears only the faintest of halos in most Hollywood eyes, but Coburn is enthusiastic about her. Once, too busy for a studio sitting, she had him come to her house in the evening. He arrived at 10 o'clock and they worked until 2 a. m.

Merle Oberon is another who's very patient and helpful. Miriam Hopkins is hard to pin down to an appointment, but she keeps those she makes. Also she offers good suggestions.

Irene Dunne is one who becomes self-conscious before the still camera, and would rather visit a dentist than sit for Coburn. He admires her a great deal. Also he likes Dolores Del Rio, who believes her impression of patrician dignity. She'd stand on her head if a cameraman needed a shot. So would Andrea Leeds.

Most men are self-conscious about posing with women, especially in kissing scenes. William Powell and Richard Dix are two notable exceptions, the photographer says. When a tight clutch is suggested, they grab the girl in a way that almost melts the emulsion on the film.

Gary Cooper is putty in a still man's hands. Cooper doesn't know how to pose, and realizes it, so he allows a photographer to tell him exactly what to do. That makes him a perfect subject.

The Old Gifts

The lean year wanes to Christmas. What shall we, the pinched ones, we the empty-handed give. Whose yesterdays are but futurity and whose tomorrows with the zeal to live are all but eaten up? We may not bring new gifts, the choice of wealth; but we can take some old gifts from our earthly garnering. And give them to the world for Christ's sweet sake. For there are still upon life's attic shelf a few old treasures worthy passing on: Courage forgotten; love that knows not self. But only others; virtue men thought gone. We yet may give. If time's thick dust we stir, We'll find our gold and frankincense and myrror. —Selected.

Fisherman Loses Tooth Landing 3-Pound Bass

CONNEVILLE, Ind.—Hereofore, fishing hasn't been classified as a dangerous sport, but Van Frank, Conneville barber, now claims it is—especially since he lost a tooth landing a three-pound bass. Frank was reeling in his catch when the fish broke water with a leap toward him. The sudden shock to the line caused the tooth to strike him in the mouth, and pop went the molar. Van got the bass, though.

Vote Illinois Star Most Valuable Man

The Junior Department of the First Methodist Sunday school entertained at a most delightful Christmas party Monday evening in the junior department at the church. Christmas decorations were used throughout the rooms, and a lovely lighted tree bore presents for each pupil. Games were played and delicious refreshments were served. Rev. and Mrs. Fred R. Harrison were guests and received an attractive gift from the department. Officers and teachers present were: Miss Guyola Bayne, superintendent; Miss Mary Sue Anderson, secretary; Miss Don Smith, Mrs. Lyman Anderson, strong and Miss Dell McClanahan, teachers; Miss Mamie Briant was an appreciated guest.

A very delightful party among the younger set, was the party given Monday evening by Miss Mary Frances Hammonds at her attractive new country home Quilts Nest near Rocky Mount. The rooms were bright and cheery with Christmas symbols and greenery with dancing was enjoyed throughout the evening. A decorated lighted Christmas tree added to the festive spirit and delicious refreshments were served to about 16 members of the senior class and friends.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
LINDA BENTON—Hereofore, daughter of famous stage actor, DARLENE THOMAS—Hereofore, flying "daredevil." WITH A THREAT—Barry, more's grandmother, a "strong woman."

Yesterday, Rita Blanchard entered the picture. Linda doesn't know exactly how, except that Mrs. Trent and Barry are concerned in some manner. How will it affect her life?

CHAPTER V

LATER that day, when Linda ran downstairs to fetch Mrs. Trent's afternoon mail, Barry stepped from the library door into her path.

"Don't I rate even a few minutes once a day?" he demanded; and swinging her from her feet, he held her close to him for a moment. Then he set her gently down again.

"You're so little, Titania—so little to do to a man what you're doing to me," he murmured.

"I must go," Linda whispered on a quick breath.

Barry, she was remembering, had a way with the lower classes.

"This afternoon, then," Barry begged, "while Grandmother's taking her nap. In the library—nobody comes there."

"No," said Linda. "No, Barry."

"Why not?"

"Because," Linda gushed, "I can't be stealing around in your grandmother's house—hiding with you in corners like a—oh, Barry, you must see that I can't!"

"You're not letting the Duchess legend of the Trent women get you down, are you, darling? They were no doubt a fine, upstanding lot of women, as I should be the last to deny. But I'll take mine little and sweet, with hands like Titania's," he lifted one of her hands to his cheek—"and feel that barely reach the floor when she sits in a man-size chair. And all the better if she turns pale at the sight of blood—especially if it's mine. . . . Anything else?"

"Well—" Linda hesitated. It was hard to think with his dark head so near the touch of her hand. "We haven't known each other so very long, have we?"

"You'd be surprised to find out how much I know about you, but—" he sat up and grinned as if at a new and entirely amusing idea—"I see! You're sold on that bromide of the Duchess about a girl in every port, eh? Well, there's this to be said about that: after you've knocked about a bit, you've picked up some pretty yehnie ideas about women. The girl I ask to marry me stays asked."

When Linda sat very still for a moment, not knowing what to say because she could not be sure how much he meant, Barry said, his eyes on the hand he still held in his, "Listen, Titania! Suppose you knew that I was going to—oh, let's put it differently! . . . Suppose you knew that I had to go away, almost at once, and might not come back for—well, for a long time. . . . Got that?"

"Yes," said Linda, startled by his unwonted gravity.

"Would you marry me then, or would you still feel that we must wait until we knew each other better?"

Linda said, "I would marry you if it were the last thing I did," and was amazed to hear her own voice speaking the words.

"In spite of the Duchess and what she might say?"

"In spite of the whole world."

"And you will remember that I asked you this, and what you answered?"

"I will remember," she said.

"That's being a fine brave Trent woman," Barry said, and laughed exultantly.

At the sound of impatient movements above, Linda broke away and ran guiltily up the stairs.

A LITTLE later that afternoon Linda thought she had the answer to the question she had asked herself earlier in the day.

Old Miranda, answering the telephone at her elbow in the drawing room called to Linda as she passed in the hall outside, "Oh, Miss Benton, please tell my grandmother that Mrs. Blanchard wishes to speak to him. . . . Oh, and, Miss Benton, the Christmas wreaths have been delivered. Won't you see that they are properly placed?"

Linda, hanging Christmas wreaths in the front parlor, tried not to listen to Barry's brief telephone conversation in the hall. But she could not help hearing him say laughingly just before he hung up, "Why, yes, Rita. I might be able to manage that—for old times' sake—if you'll promise not to invite the whole county."

Old Miranda evidently heard, too; for when her grandson came into the room, she studied his blandly innocent face with shrewd speculation before she said, "Now since when, Barrymore Trent, have you taken the veil and forsworn society?"

Linda hurried upstairs. She did not want to talk to Barry just then.

She did not have a later opportunity, for a few minutes afterward he dashed out of the house and drove away. He did not return for dinner, nor for the evening in the drawing room. Linda did not ask any questions about him; and old Miranda did not volunteer any information.

Linda hated herself for the thought, but it would come, turning her alternately cold and hot with shame and misery: had Barry gone to Rita Blanchard—almost directly from those moments with her on the stairway? Had all that been really just some of his teasing nonsense? . . . After all, just what had he said that afternoon? Not "will you marry me?" but "would you marry me—if . . . ?" . . . Did old Miranda guess, too, that he had gone to Mrs. Blanchard? For old Miranda was strangely silent that evening.

THEY did not play their usual game. Once in the early evening Mrs. Trent glanced at the clock, which it seemed to Linda she had been furtively watching ever since dinner, and asked Linda to turn on the radio. She listened impassively to a brief news broadcast, and with a silent movement of her head, ordered it off again.

It seems strange that there isn't any trace of that plane Captain Trent was so worried about, doesn't it? Linda roused from her own unhappy thoughts to say, "He said Lieutenant Rust is the best pilot he knows."

"Ah?" said old Miranda absently. "So he did. . . . Well, sooner or later, for the best of them, there seems to come one last time. No wonder they're a heedless lot. . . . Shall we go on with our reading, my dear Miss Benton?"

So Linda read on and on. But this evening Miranda Trent did not knit, nor did she drowse—nor did she seem to listen. She sat very straight as usual, her eyes on some dim, dark distance, as if they would penetrate space, and find out something beyond the ken of ordinary vision.

It was almost midnight when Barry came in. At sight of his tense, tired face, old Miranda got slowly to her feet, her hands trembling a little on the head of her cane.

"Well?" she asked simply. "Well?" and stood waiting.

Then, when he only nodded, she said, "I see," and sat down a little heavily on the chair behind her, her eyes never leaving her grandson's face.

400 Fans Watch Hard-Fought Contest at Emmet Gymnasium

EMMET, Ark.—Approximately 400 fans saw the Emmet High School senior girls basketball team keep its undefeated record intact by defeating a strong Columbus team, 21 to 20 in a sensational thrill-packed game here Monday night.

At no time was either team more than four points in the lead. It was a hard-fought battle all the way, and was probably the greatest defensive battle ever witnessed in the Emmet High School gymnasium.

Three minutes before the final whistle, the Columbus team was leading by one point. Nona Crank, Emmet forward, came through with a field goal in the last minute of play to give Emmet the victory, 21 to 20.

First Columbus Defeat
Because of bitter rivalry between the two teams, players on both sides appeared to be over-anxious. At the start of the game Clara Crabb, Emmet center, Columbus team, 21 to 20 in a sensational thrill-packed game here Monday night.

The first quarter ended with Emmet leading 4 to 3. The Columbus team forged ahead in the second period and was leading at the half, 9 to 8. The last two periods saw the lead change frequently.

The battle was somewhat rough, however, no player fouled out. There was no substitutions at any time. It was the fourth time in the past two years that the two teams have met. Emmet taking all four games.

It was the first defeat of the season for Columbus, having defeated several Hempstead, Howard and Little River county teams by lopsided scores.

Two bus loads of Columbus fans accompanied the Columbus team to Emmet. The next meeting of the two teams will probably be about the middle of January.

Columbus Boys Win

The Columbus senior boys, paced by the Couch brothers at forwards, had an easy time in downing the Emmet senior boys, 38 to 27. The game was fast throughout.

In a third game, the Emmet junior boys won over Columbus, 16 to 13. Guernsey High School will play here Wednesday night. Games are scheduled between junior boys and girls teams and a game between the senior boys of each school.

Appropriate Gifts for Children Listed by Service Writer

By LYDA GRAY SHAW
AP Feature Service Writer

NEW YORK—Miniature dogs with wagging tails fascinate parents on a toy-buying spree. But they won't fascinate children—at least not for long.

Large blocks, tool chests or hand-manipulated derricks would make much better Christmas gifts, according to Miss Elizabeth Irwin, who has very definite ideas on suitable toys for children. Miss Irwin is principal of the Little Red School House, a progressive school in downtown New York.

Parents usually please themselves when they're shopping for toys, she says. They don't consider the child's taste or age, or durability of the objects.

So she's set up some rules for the toy-shoppers.

1. Choose toys which stimulate the child's imagination; rather than mechanical toys. Trains that run by hand are better than electric trains. Blocks fall into the same category, but the second rule also applies to them.

2. Choose toys which help children exercise their large muscles. Large blocks, trapezes, boards to fit over saw horses and the like offer a child an excellent chance for exercise. Athletic equipment, roller skates, sleds and bicycles make good gifts.

3. Select toys that don't break easily. Tools should be well made, lest hammer heads fly off and do damage. Cheap miniature automobiles are likely to lose their wheels after a few trips around the carpet.

4. Buy games of skill rather than chance. That doesn't mean total annihilation of the "chance" type of games. Quite suitable for an occasional rainy afternoon. But games involving counting and building are far more instructive, she says.

Soldiers and guns don't fall into any of these classes, but Miss Irwin put her foot down on them because of their militaristic import. She flatly says no educator would favor them.

For the BEST Christmas Feast You've EVER HAD

Modern Menus

By NEA Service
At Christmas enough is not quite enough. We need just a little bit more. So let's take up another batch of candy and cookie recipes and use them for making delightful gifts.

In the old, almost forgotten Christmas card Germany, in the land of "Holy Night," they used to show their Christmas good will by serving Pfefferkuchen or German Peppernuts with fine wine when good friends came around to wish them "froehliche Weihnachten."

Pfefferkuchen
(German Peppernuts)
(Makes about 3 Quarts)
One-quarter cup butter, 1/2 cup lard, 1/2 cup white sugar, 1/2 cup brown sugar, 1 1/2 cups cold coffee, 5 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/4 teaspoon cloves, 1/4 teaspoon black pepper, 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/4 teaspoon allspice, 1/4 teaspoon anise seeds, 1/2 cup chopped Brazil nuts.

Cream shortening and sugar. Add maple syrup and coffee. Sift flour, baking powder and spices together and add to liquid ingredients with nuts and anise seeds, working the last portion of the flour in with the hands if necessary. Cover and let ripen overnight in refrigerator. When ready to bake, roll dough into long rolls, not more than 3/4 inch in diameter. Cut off in short bits, place on ungreased cookie sheet and bake 5 to 7 minutes in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.). These may be kept for a month or more, the flavor improving with age, when kept in a covered container.

Nut Wafers
Two eggs, 1 cup brown sugar, 3 tablespoons flour, 1/4 teaspoon baking powder, pinch salt, 1/2 pound walnuts. Beat eggs until light. Add sugar. Sift in flour, baking powder and salt together. Beat well. Add broken nut meats. Drop by spoonfuls on greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 10 minutes. Two cups sugar, 1/2 cup heavy cream.

Treat Oysters Gently And They Reciprocate

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer

It used to be very Victorian to eat oysters by gas light in grand and over-decorated Oyster Palaces. Today, every housewife knows as much about the good taste of the fresh or frozen oyster as any gay belle of the "naughty nineties." Better try a few of these for a special event or just for the family dinner when something different is wanted.

The main rule for cooking oysters reads something like this—Be Gentle and Be Brief.

Oysters en Brochette
(serves 6)

One pint Bluepoint oysters, drained, 12 slices bacon, cut in quarters. Arrange each oyster between 2 pieces of bacon on toothpick. Place in pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Broil about 3 minutes; then turn and broil other side about 3 minutes longer, or until bacon is crisp. Remove toothpicks. Serve on hot buttered toast. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Garnish with chopped parsley. Serve at once.

Oyster Benedict
Six thin slices boiled ham, 1 pint Bluepoint oysters, drained, 3 English muffins, halved and toasted, Hollandaise sauce, 12 strips pimento. Sauté ham lightly in hot skillet. Re-

Oysters Indienne makes a delicious luncheon or supper dish. It is made by combining Bluepoints, a rich sauce, curry powder and steamed rice in individual casserole.

"Primitive Area" Gets Approval

Government Purchases
145,000 Acres for National Park

ANACONDA, Mont.—(AP)—Another government "primitive area" of 145,000 acres, near here, has been approved by the United States forest service.

Unlike most national parks and forests, the "primitive" area will be unscathed by highways and inns.

To enjoy the scenery and the fishing, visitors must be hardy out-of-door persons with good hiking feet. The only roads or buildings will be those necessary for administration and fire control. Pack trails will be permitted.

On the Great Divide
It is a vast area of snow-capped move ham from skillet. Sauté oysters in ham fat in skillet until edges begin to curl. Arrange 1 slice of ham and 4 oysters on each toasted muffin half. Cover with Hollandaise sauce and garnish with pimento strips. Serves 6.

Oysters Indienne
(Serves 4)

One pint Bluepoint oysters, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 cup oyster liquid and rich milk, 1 1/2 tablespoons flour, dash of salt, dash of pepper, 1/4 teaspoon curry powder.

Sauté oysters very gently in 2 tablespoons butter until edges begin to curl. Remove from fire. Drain, reserving liquor; add rich milk to make 1 cup. Melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter in saucepan and stir in flour and seasonings. Add oyster liquor and milk gradually and cook over low flame until thickened, stirring constantly. Add oysters and heat thoroughly. Serve with boiled rice.

peaks and high lakes extending 40 miles along the crest of the continental divide. Elevations range from 6,300 feet to 10,000 feet. Waters which rise in the area flow both to the Pacific and Atlantic oceans.

Announcement that the region had been designated a primitive wilderness area was received from Washington by Charles A. Joy of Butte, supervisor of the Deer Lodge National forest.

Wild Life Plentiful
The region is a fisherman's paradise, with dozens of lakes and many streams. Few men, except forest service employees and the hardest mountaineers, ever have penetrated its depths.

Wild life abounds and hundreds of elk spend their summer grazing in the uplands. There also are Rocky Mountain goats, sheep, moose, black bear and deer. Beaver work in the streams, and the patient traveler can see mink, otter, marten and fox.

So They Say

You know, copper, the only kind of a policeman that's a good policeman is a dead one. You're all rats.—Paul Reeder, 18, Chicago, accused of murder.

I don't know what it is—I happen never to have come across it before.—Dr. William Beebe, scientist, who failed to identify a strange fish found near Baltimore.

Never again! The cost is prohibitive.—Tommy Manville, New York city, married and divorced four times, who says he will never marry again.

Everyone in the United States, except perhaps our State Department, knows that a state of war exists in China.—U. S. Senator Arthur Capper, Kansas.

Our ranks are now thinned down to the veterans who can take punishment.—Representative John Martin, Colorado, after a five-hour congressional debate reduced attendance from 534 to 21.

Women Admitted to Sailfish Club

Woman Holds World Record for Atlantic 'Catch' of 71 Pounds

By NEA Service
MIAMI BEACH—Nowadays when the alleged head of the family goes after warriors of the deep, the little woman occupies the other chair in the fishing cruiser, frequently and disgustedly saying: "If you hadn't tightened up on your drag so fast, you'd have had him."

Charter boat captains at the Miami Beach fishing dock reveal that one-third of those who go after salt water game from this port are women and that the percentage gradually is increasing.

Qualification for membership in the Miami Beach Sailfish Club is landing a sailfish in the Gulf Stream off Miami Beach without assistance, and 26 of 35 new members admitted this fall are women.

"Women fish better than half the men," says Captain W. W. (Pop) Howard of the local charter boat fleet. "They pay attention to what you tell them."

"I was mate on the Offspray when Mrs. Jerome Clark of Cincinnati landed her 555-pound blue marlin," asserts "Slim" Felt, now Howard's mate aboard the Dawn, "and I've never seen a tougher fish handled prettier in my life."

Mrs. Clark was the third largest blue marlin ever caught by a woman.

"The trouble with most men new to ocean fishing is that they go to work on the fish as soon as he's hooked," recites Captain Howard. "They fight just as hard as the fish, and that's setting up the odds in favor of the fish. The angler is first to tire when working on big fellows. A little technique is better than a strong back. Women seem to pick up the finesse faster."

Women Employ Technique
Some holds true in connection with the sailfish, smaller than the marlin, but a more spectacular fighter.

"I remember a day when Captain Howard and I were out with Mr. and Mrs. John Rutherford of Pittsburgh and Mary Lawrence," relates "Slim" Felt.

"Mrs. Lawrence caught four sailfish in a row. On the last one she said, 'Slim, help me with this one,' and I replied, 'Lady, nobody whose already caught three sailfish needs any help.' And she'd never even seen one be-

Fleas? Why, No Sir, Monkeys Just Nervous

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—So you thought monkeys had fleas? You can take the word of Col. A. D. Dawson who has trained monkeys for years that they don't and all that scratching they do is just plain nervousness.

Even as the Colonel (he's a Kentucky colonel) blasted the monkeys' flea-flea legend, Jocko, a white-faced ringer for the jungles of Brazil, sat back on his haunches and with a sideways look calmly did nothing.

"Fleas don't stay on monkeys," Dawson continues. "They can't stand the monkeys and furthermore they won't get on anything that a monkey has handled," he adds emphatically.

"That's a tip for dog-owners, say Dawson. Just get a monkey to play with the family dog and out the flea men are."

"Monkeys," he says, "are like children. Some are smart and others are stupid. Also some are not physically strong enough to do tricks." say Dawson. "A never-forgets. You can teach it another trick and come back to the first one weeks later, and it will remember it."

Cage Ruling Dims His Hopes for 9th Letter

IOWA CITY (NEA)—Because he stands six feet, eight inches and jumped center on the cage team has young Floyd Deffer of Iowa is fast losing hope of making nine major leaguers as a Hawk-eye athlete. Due to the elimination of the center jump this season it isn't likely that Deffer will play enough to earn his monogram. The 230-pounder isn't built for the new style of play. He also is a weight man on the track squad, and a tackle in football.

Firm, Juicy Apples Best to Bake

It's shape alone will not make an apple a success. For baking it must be firm, yet tender throughout, and it should be baked in a moderate oven (350 to 375 degrees F.) for from 45 to 60 minutes. Both very sour apples which contain a great quantity of water and mealy apples are quickly reduced to pulp when cooked, and are therefore not suitable for baking. Firm juicy apples are best. And they should have a touch of tartness, too. Rome Beauty, Winesap, York Imperial make good baking apples. So-called "greenings" are best for pies and sauce.

Even the old-fashioned baked apple can take on a touch of novelty. The use of nuts and maple syrup adds to their flavor interest.

Apples Baked in Maple Syrup
Pare six or eight apples to within an inch of the blossom end. Core apples but do not break through blossom end. Stand apples in a deep baking dish, allowing a small space between each apple. Fill cored portion of each apple with chopped pecan meats. Mix one cup of maple syrup and one and one-half cups of water and two tablespoons of butter. Pour mixture over apples. Cover apples and bake until almost tender in a moderate oven (350 degrees F. to 375 degrees F.). Remove cover during last period of cooking. Bake apples occasionally during baking. Serve with whipped cream, if desired.

The direct way to a child's heart—even though he be quite a grown man—perfectly baked apples, baked with maple syrup and stuff with pecan nuts.

Apple Macaroni Pudding
(4 to 6 servings)
Two cups raw apples, 8 macaronis, 1 lemon, 2 eggs, 2 egg whites, 1½ cups sugar, 1 cup water.
Peel and cut apples very fine. Roll the macaronis with a rolling pin. Save ¼ cup of sugar for meringue. Place a layer of apples, then macaronis and sugar, lemon and orange juice and grated rind; continue until dish is full. Pour water over all. Bake 30 minutes in moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Remove from oven and cover with meringue made from egg whites beaten stiff and sugar. Put in hot oven (400 degrees F.) and brown quickly. Serve hot.

Apple Salad
(4 to 6 servings)
Six small cooking apples, 1 cup red cinnamon candies, 1 cup water, 1 lemon, 1 cup sugar, ½ cup almonds, 1 package cream cheese.
Peel and core apples. Make a syrup of sugar, water, lemon juice and candies. Put apples in and cook very slowly, basting constantly. When tender remove and chill thoroughly. Blanch the almonds and cut in half lengthwise. Put apples on a bed of lettuce, stick almonds in like a porcupine and fill center with cream cheese and serve with half mayonnaise and half whipped cream.

Cromwell Is Talked as Jersey Senator

Wealthy Author, World Traveler Is Mentioned for Post

By NEA Service
NEW YORK—If James H. R. Cromwell is appointed U. S. senator from New Jersey, many a senator is apt to take one look and then fall back on the words of the Yankee who saw the giraffe and commented, "There ain't no such animal!"

For this is the strange apparition the senators would see:
A man wealthy in his own right, married to "the richest girl in the world" (Doris Duke).
A man who is a money reformer throughout at home with Father Coughlin, Senator Elmer Thomas and Representative Wright Patman.
An amateur boxer good enough to have gone three rounds on pretty even terms with Tommy Loughran.
Author of two books and numerous pamphlets and articles demanding reform of capitalism, and deploring that the American government isn't democratic enough.

A world traveler who has arraigned the Russian system as a bitter hoax, who "loathes Fascism," and who thinks it would be a good idea to abolish the Constitution and the Supreme Court.
Business Ups and Downs
James Henry Roberts Cromwell is the son of Oliver Eaton Cromwell, whose wife later became Mrs. Edward Elstobury, wife of the Philadelphia banker and Morgan partner. Thus he is the son and stepson of two moneyed families.

When the World war came, young Cromwell enlisted in the Navy, and later transferred to the Marines, attaining the rank of captain. After the war he entered the Drexel banking firm in Philadelphia in which his step father was interested.

when the Dodge interests were sold for $100,000,000, the finance company had already been a big success.

His Project a "Bust"

In 1926 he launched his most

grandiose project, the development in Florida of an "American Riviera" called Floranada. On 3600 acres of land, his American-British Improvement Corporation planned to build a city.

But the boom in Florida land went lost, and so did the American-British company, wiping out most of Cromwell's own fortune and millions loaned by his family.

In 1928 Cromwell and his wife were divorced. They have a daughter, Christine, now 14.

It was then that Cromwell's education began, as he put it. He saw not only the crash of his personal fortune, but the discharge of hundreds of lifetime employees of bankrupt enterprises. He wrote a book called "The Voice of Young America," attacking current business methods and urging a better distribution of wealth.

Cromwell went to the mat with the economic problem that was baffling everybody else, too. And he came up an inflationist and an enthusiast for public ownership of public utilities, unemployment insurance, modification of the government for greater democracy, and prohibition of tax-exempt securities.

In "The Voice of Young America" he drew a strict line between the "privocracy," rich men whose wealth was based on privileges without service, and the "plutocracy," who made their money rendering socially valuable service, like Ford.

Still a Reformer

In 1935 he married Doris Duke, who already had some $10,000,000, inherited another 10 or 20 recently when she became 25, and has 10 more coming from the estate of James B. Duke, the tobacco tycoon. They set forth on a world honeymoon tour.

His interest in monetary reform, however, is unabated, and with it the belief that it is the distributive system which has bogged down under capitalism. Senatorial jaws dropped

Blind Pensioner Claims Dukedom

OAKLAND, Calif.—(AP)—George Holmby Bruce is 83, blind and on relief, but if right were might, he says, he would be the Duke of Portland and wealthy.

Bruce asserts his grandfather was born of a romance between the fourth duke's eldest son and a 16-year-old farm girl. He declares that years ago when he was carrying on an active fight for the estate, he spurned a $250,000 offer of compromise.

Wax candles are probably of Phoenician origin. The composite candle of today is made of stearin and paraffin.

When he proposed to the Senate Agriculture Committee his plan for "negative interest."

Ozan

Durant Goodlett and Carl Loftin, of Marfa, Texas, have returned to Marfa, after a few days visit with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Goodlett.

Eugenia Goodlett, of El Dorado, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Goodlett.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Stuart, and Mrs. Eugene Goodlett were shopping in Hope last week.

Jack Goodlett, of Camp Aiton, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Goodlett.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rogers, Mrs. Cloan Stribling and little daughter, Nancy Frank, and Mrs. Richard Jones, all of Throckmorton, Texas, and Mrs. Richard Humphrey, of Dallas, Texas, have returned to their homes after a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. F. P. City. The group was in Ozan to attend the funeral of W. H. City, Mrs.

Roberts' brother.

E. Haselman, who has been in the Julia Chister hospital at Hope, has returned to his home in Ozan.

Many of the school children and a number of adults have been ill of flu and scolds for the past two weeks. There have been several cases of pneumonia in the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Stuart entertained a group of their friends with a pork supper last Saturday night. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Stuart, Neil Stuart, Irvin Monroe Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Robbins, and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Goodlett, and Mary Naomi Goodlett.

Gambling Held No Bar to Citizenship

SFOKANE, Wash.—(AP)—Eight arrests for gambling do not bar a man from American citizenship, U. S. Judge J.

Stanley Webster ruled in passing a Yugoslav applicant.

"If the gambling laws were enforced against our native born sons I imagine the population of Spokane would be somewhat reduced," the judge said.
